

Join the effort to understand PDDs and their impact on daily life

- Robb Matthews, a doctoral student at Texas A&M University, is gathering information on children with PDDs and the difficulties they may have organizing and directing their thoughts/emotions/actions in their daily lives.
- Along these lines he is looking for parents of children with PDDs (ages 6-11 years) to complete a brief set of rating scales. Participating parents will also be asked to take a similar set of rating scales to one of their child's teacher for completion.
- Please contact him if you or someone you know would be interested in participating in this study or if you have any questions or concerns. If you are involved in a PDD related parenting group, Robb would welcome the opportunity to present more information at a group meeting as well.
- Robb and his dissertation committee believe that this line of research has the potential to improve services for these children and their families.
